No Limit Poker Rules

- Players will be held responsible for protecting their hands at all times.
- The number of raises in any betting round is unlimited.
- All bets must be at least equal to the minimum bring-in, the big blind in flop games, unless the player is going all-in.
- All raises must be equal to or greater than the size of the previous bet or raise on that betting round, except for an all-in wager. A player who has already checked or called may not subsequently raise an all-in bet that is less than the full size of the last bet or raise. However, a player who has not already acted is not compelled to complete the all-in bet/raise to the minimum amount. That player may raise any amount at or above the minimum bet.
- A wager is not binding until the chips are actually released into the pot, unless the player has made a verbal statement of action. A player may reach forward with a stack of chips in his/her hand and is not committed to making a raise to the full amount of chips in his/her hand. However, a player may not reach forward with a stack in his/her hand and check. This will result in a minimum bet.
- A player that says "raise" must clarify the amount or put all the chips in the pot with one motion.
- If there is a discrepancy between a player's verbal statement and the amount put into the pot, the bet will be corrected to the verbal statement.
- If a call is short due to a counting error, the amount must be corrected, even if the bettor has shown down a superior hand.
- In No Limit, players that raise must either announce the size of their bet or move the chips in one motion. Anything else may be considered a string bet. A bet of a single chip as the initial bettor without comment is considered to be the full amount of the chip allowed. However, a player acting on a previous bet with a larger denomination chip is calling the previous bet unless this player makes a verbal declaration to raise the pot. (This includes acting on the forced bet of the big blind.
- If a player tries to bet or raise less than the legal minimum and has more chips, the wager must be increased to the proper size. (This does not apply to a player who has unintentionally put too much in to call.) The wager is brought up to the sufficient amount only, no greater size.
- When two players are left, the button should be placed in front of the small blind. The first card should be dealt to the big blind.
- Players, whether in the hand or not, may not discuss the hands until the action is complete. A penalty may be given for discussion of hands during the play.
- A player who exposes his cards during the play in a multi-way pot may incur a penalty.
- If a player who makes or verbalizes action out of turn shall be held to that action when it is their turn, unless intervening action changes the action the out of turn player is facing. If a player in between the bettor and the player acting out of turn raised, than the out of turn player may have the option to act on his hand as if he had not acted out of turn. Substantial action after the out of turn player will however substantiate the action, and it will stand.
- All chips must be visibly displayed at all times.
- Management and Floor people reserve the right to make decisions which are in the best interest of the game. Management's decisions are final.
